TWO NEW HOLIDAY NOVELS.

"BOUND BY THE LAW."

By KATE THYSON MARR.

Is an interesting and true picture of a noble woman's life. All the tragic events of her life could not obliterate the innate nobility of her woman's heart. A type of the wholly selfish man is also phenomenally well drawn. There can be no question of the power of this writer to interest and charm the majority of readers. The lights and shadows are delicately arranged, and the story deals with characters, scenes and incidents of our daily experience. Beautifully bound in cloth, $1.50.

HOUSES OF GLASS.

By WALLACE LLOYD, M. D.

It is more important than most books, and deserves special attention for several reasons. From a purely literary standpoint it has claims, being exceedingly well-written, and most profoundly felt. It is being founded upon philosophy, the story is firm, clear-cut, and as interesting as to lift the book far above the level of ordinary romances. Elegantly bound in cloth, $1.50.
